He regards it as "an excise tax upon the privilege of doing business as an artificial entity, and of freedom from a general partnership liability enjoyed by those who own stock." It is regarded as a tax upon success rather regarded as a tax upon success rather than upon failure. The President mentions another merit of the plan is that it involves the Federal supervision of the accounts of all interstate corporations, thus giving the government knowledge profits of such corporations, and prevent-ing further abuse of power.

SAYINGS OF MRS. SOLOMON.

Being the Confessions of the Seven Hundredth Wife.

Translated by HELEN ROWLAND. Behold, my daughter, there dwelt three damsels in mine house; and unto one of them Fate gave great beauty; and unto the second, great cleverness; and unto the third, a sweet smile. And the first damsel said:

"Lo! I will marry early. Yea, I shall find a husband; for this is the beginning of an easy life." And lo! she married at sixteen and had seven children, one after another. Yet, her husband being poor, she did all her own housework.

Yea, she buried her beauty under a mass of embonpoint and a gingham apron. And at twenty-eight she was a sight. And the second damsel cried: "Go to! I shall have a career. Yea, I shall be famous and I shall get my picture in the papers!" And she went to live in a studio. And the fruits of her labors were low art and loneliness, instead of cradles and crockery. But the third damself murmured unto herself saving:

"I shall put my sweet smiles where they will do the most good!" And she became a stenographer. Yea, she labored hard, keeping her hair always curied and using a good sachet. And it came to pass that in time she married her employer-even a millionaire!

Then the three damsels returned unto mine house, and I charged them, saying, "What hast thou done with thy talents." And the first wept, saving: "Lo! because that I was so easily satisfied, behold Fate hath taken away the little which I had. Yea, now I am a widow; and I take in sewing to support my seven children. For a husband is an asset, but children are a liability." And the second sighed, avowing: "Behold, I have got my picture in the papers, yet am I an old maid with a chronic grouch. For a woman without a husband is more useless than two left-hand gloves." But the third fell upon my neck, crying: "Mamma. I have invested my sweet smile where it would bring me unto thee bringing a French maid and lots of alimony!" And I took her in my arms, saying: "Well done, thou good and faithful daughter! For a husband is a doubtful proposition, and a career is an undoubted waste of time; but real money is the root of all pleasure. Yea, thou hast spent thy substance value received; and, lo! it hath increased an hundredfold. Behold, I come upon a sure thing!" Selah!
